Dear Mr President:

I am concerned about trust. As president you are entrusted to manage many of the affairs of our country from trade to law enforcement from the military to border security along with power over the courts through appointments and the Justice department and over laws through legislative veto power. It is essential that you carry out these duties in good faith. I am worried that in other aspects of life you have shown yourself to be extremely untrustworthy and have further moved to cover up such failings. The most obvious example right now is your affair with Ms Daniels and the subsequent pay off, but your tax returns, your assurances to dreamers and your collusion with Russia also come quickly to mind. If you can not adhere even to your marriage vows or take responsibility once you have failed it seems unlikely you will keep your promises to the country.

Please assure me that you will not cover up your actions.

I am very proud to be a US citizen and a large part of that derives from our government for the people.

Sincerely,
Eric Babson
