Dear Mr President:

I am concerned about bluster.

Projection is so common for you that I rarely even notice who it is you are accusing of collusion with Russia, rewriting history, weaponizing agencies, misspending FEMA funds, using inflammatory language, being crooked or corrupt, stealing an election or now treason but simply wonder what you have done this time. Besides the childhood tactic of cutting off criticism your current choice of maximal charges against the most visible targets appears to be an attempt to distract the focus from your child sex trafficking entanglements. This week Director of National Intelligence Gabbard went so far as to accuse President Obama of treason.

Please assure me that you will fire Ms Gabbard.

My pride in the US derives in part from our decency.

Sincerely,

Eric Babson
