Dear Senator Feinstein:

I am concerned about lying Senators. Effective governance requires the ability to negotiate in good faith. At the most basic level this requires that people avoid lying. While lying is among the many impeachable offenses President Trump is guilty of this unethical behavior should not be allowed to spread into the Senate. If the Senate ignores the outright lies of Senators Cotton and Perdue regarding their meeting with the President and their related libel against Senator Durbin it will further erode our trust and hurt the reputations and effectiveness of all Senators. The Senate must remain strong and hold itself to its traditional high standards in the effort to survive the insanity of President Trump.

Please assure me that you will refer Senators Cotton and Perdue to the Ethics Committee.

I am very proud to be a US citizen and a large part of that derives from our responsible government.

s Sincerely,
Eric Babson
