Dear Mr President:

I am concerned about our government. After a century of extraordinary political stability the misfortune of interesting times now appears possible. This stability has allowed for unprecedented economic, engineering and scientific successes while around the world any number of terrifying examples of instability have played out. Since the 2015 election campaign you have been breaking norms of civility and deference to other powers but your feud with the House is your most explicit repudiation yet of the constitution. You have failed to comply with a wide range of congressional requests and are now refusing to comply with demands. The power struggle resulting from such a constitutional crises is likely to weaken our country for decades to come and such treason could well turn out very poorly for you.

Please assure me that you will honor congressional subpoenas.

I am very proud to be a US resident and a large part of that derives from our constitution.

Sincerely,
Eric Babson
