Dear Mr President:

I am concerned about poor medical advice. The use of the presidential bully pulpit to float invented medical advice has already killed many thousands of Americans. You invented alternative facts and disputed needs for equipment and distancing. You spent weeks pushing a vaguely plausible but ultimately deadly hydroxychloroquine treatment leading to firing the head of vaccine development, drug shortages and dangerously early tests. Now you have recommended ingesting bleach 'just to see what would happen'. While such advice seems ludicrous so does much of what you say and yet you know that millions of people still trust your leadership. Such games are sociopathic.

Please assure me that you will take your responsibilities seriously.

I am very proud to be a US resident and a large part of that derives from our competent governance.

Sincerely,
Eric Babson
