Dear Attorney General Becerra:

I am concerned about climate change. After four years of leadership denial and one of a horrific pandemic the climate trajectory has considerably worsened and every year of inaction makes things more bleak. World action is needed and national leadership would be a good start but right now it is essential to get those most at fault on board with change. Cars, power and agriculture are the big three. California regulations have brought some car companies to the table but the public cost of fossil fuels is largely being ignored by oil companies. Several California municipalities have sued but the weight of your office would be harder to ignore.

Please assure me that you will sue over climate change.

I am very proud to be a US resident and a large part of that derives from our past climate leadership.

Sincerely,
Eric Babson
